DEATH OF GEORGE, KING OF SAXONY

Succumbs to Long Illness, Aged 72 Years.

TWO YEARS' TROUBLED REIGN

Succeeded His Brother and Was Soon Involved in Scandal of Crown Princess.

DRESDEN, Oct. 15 .- King George of King George of Saxony had a severe Illness a few weeks after succeeding to the throne on the death of his brother, King Albert. He was then seventy years of age, and the two years of his reign were passed in much ill health and

He closely resembled his brother, King Albert, in figure and character, and in Albert, in figure and character, and in a simple and touching proclamation to his people King George at the outset of his reign alluded to the difficulty of succeeding a monarch so popular as his brother. Such an appeal could not lose its force with the simple-minded, warmhearted Saxons, but King George had long enjoyed the regard of his new subects when he was heir presumptive.

Fond of Arts.

All his life long he was devotedly interested in music, painting and histori-cal studies. As a member of the Saxon cal studies. As a member of the Saxon upper house for forty years he took a keen, active part in its deliberations, but his special attention was given to the Saxon army, of which he had the supervision for many years.

A general order which he issued some years ago, directed against the harsh treatment of the rank and file prevalent under the military system of Germany, won for him the affection of the common scidier. He fought in the Austrian and French campaigns, and at Sedan marrowly escaped death, for as he was watching the battle with his staff, an English officer. Lieutenant Colonel Pemberton, military attache of the British government, was struck by a buljects when he was heir presumptive.

Seventy-two Years of Age.

Seventy-two Years of Age.

King George was born in 1832, and age at his death. He ascended the throne June 19, 1802, his reign thus lasting only two years and three months. He married a Portuguese princess, the Infante Marie Anne, and had five children, the eldest son, the Crown Prince Frederick August, 'succeeding to the throne at the age of thirty-nine.

A few months after King George's accession the Saxon royal family was involved in the seandal of the elopement of the crown princess, the Archduchess Louise Antoinette of Austria, with M. Giron, the Belgian tutor of her two elder boys. King George was greatly affected by this untoward circumstance, which further impaired his health.

Some time ago, Mr. Pierce made a tour of the Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, for a syndicate of newspapers. The articles, appearing over a familiar pseudonym, attracted some attention, and were considered one of the best descriptions of this wonder,

"Kentucky," said the speaker, "is not part of the Solid South—it is hollow."

Attention was called to the vast areas of cavernous limestone, with particular reference to the Mammoth Cave. The audience was taken on a personally conducted lecture tour through the cave, or rather through twenty miles of it. Some of these subterranean passages, were described as underground boule—in the solid south—it is hollow."

The audience was taken on a personally conducted lecture tour through the cave, or rather through twenty miles of it. Some of these subterranean passages, were described as underground boule—street described as underground boule—str for in-hand, while some of the domes were pletured as giant thimbles, large enough to fit over a church steeple. Not the least interesting part of the lecture was the acount of catching blind fish on Echo River.

The lecture was fully illustrated with copyrighted stereopticon views, showing every phase of the great cave. The attendance was large, and the audience highly appreciative, gratifying considerations to the committee having the charge of these free lectures to the paople.

Twenty-five Dollars Each to Trainmen for Quick Run to Lower Altitude.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 15.—Almost on top of the Rocky Mountains H. O. Havetrainmen $25 apiece to make a quick re-turn to Denver, where summer weather was prevailing.

Mr. Havemeyer desired to ascertain the advantage the newly opened section offered for sugar beet culture and started for Arrowhead, the present terminus of the line. Soon after getting into the mountains a gale sprang up and before reaching Mammoth the trainmen were frequently compelled to shovel snow from the track. At Mammoth, which is so situated that the engine driver was afraid to run fast. Although the trainmen advised a postponement of the return trip, Havemeyer insisted upon going back at once.

On this portion of the road there are several new trestles over high chasms, and Chester Foltz, the engine driver, accustomed to mountain railroading, said it made his hair stand on end to cross the gulches in such a gale. Fifteen miles this side of Mammoth a particu-larly large snow drift was encountered. and the sugar man, impatient at the delay, donned cap and mitts to direct the work of removing the snow. Mr. Havemeyer after his return shook hands with the engine driver and said he would like to know more of a man who had the nerve to run locomotives on mountain roads in winter. Mr. Have-meyer said he would not have missed the experience for anything, but he would not care to undergo it again.
